Dangers of Gorilla Hunting—Curious Fowl

Prince William of Sweden sitting beside the body of a huge gorilla that he had killed when it was charging at him with great ferocity.

The tremendous bulk of a gorilla is shown by this comparison of the back of one to that of a man.

Bodies of two female gorillas that were killed by hunting party near Mount Mikenko, Central Africa.

THE interesting specimens of gorillas found on this page fell victims to the guns of Prince William of Sweden and members of his hunting party in the volcanic region near Lake Kiva, in Central Africa. The party had a license to kill fourteen gorillas, and they bagged the full quota. The strength and ferocity of the gorillas made the trip one of peril and excitement and there were several narrow escapes. If one of the huge beasts can come to close quarters he can almost certainly kill the hunter. Prince William thus describes an encounter: "The beast had burst through the bushes within a few feet from me. There was not much time to deliberate. He rushed at me with lightning rapidity. A .350 magnum bullet right through the lungs put an end to his life. He was a white-haired giant and weighed nearly four hundred pounds."

FRIZZLED FOWL

Queer specimen of Allentown, Pa., hen, of which only a few are known to exist. The disheveled feathers are natural and not stimulated by a wind.

IRISH SIGNERS OF THE AGREEMENT THAT CREATED THE IRISH FREE STATE PHOTOGRAPHED AT THEIR HEADQUARTERS IN LONDON

Left to right, seated, are Arthur Griffith, E. J. Duggan, Michael Collins and Robert Barton. Standing between the chairs of Mr. Collins and Mr. Barton is Gavan Duffy. These are the five delegates who signed the agreement on behalf of Ireland with the British authorities that has already been ratified by the House of Commons by an overwhelming majority and has been the subject of heated discussion for weeks in the Dail Eireann or Irish Parliament. The opposition to ratification has been led by Mr. de Valera, head of the Sinn Fein movement, who has stood out for an Irish Republic pure and simple, and has criticised the oath of allegiance agreed on by the signatories of the document. The members in favor of ratification have been led by Mr. Griffith and Mr. Collins.

Joy in Ireland Over Freeing of Prisoners

Great multitudes gathered at Amiens Street Station to welcome back the released prisoners who had been interned at the Maryborough Camp. The greeting that the former prisoners received was tumultuous and hilarious. The release came in time for the men to reach their homes for the Christmas holidays. (© Wide World Photos.)

One of the released prisoners from Maryborough taking home with him the mascot of the camp, a white cat called Spike, who had gone through the hunger strike that had been instituted by some of the prisoners. Spike, while fond of the prisoners, had not thought it necessary to do any hunger striking on his own account. (© Wide World Photos.)

SCIENTIFIC INVENTION THAT CLEARS THE ATMOSPHERE

This machine, recently invented and operated by the Medical Supply Association of Great Britain, has proved that the air can be entirely cleared of fog, smoke and foreign ingredients. The fog or other objectionable element is drawn through the tube at left by the powerful magnet seen on the right, and after it has passed through is entirely dissipated.

Royal Consent to the Marriage of Princess Mary

George R. V.

George the Fifth, by the Grace of God, of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas King, Defender of the Faith, to all to whom these Presents shall come sendeth Greeting!

Whereas by an Act of Parliament intituled "An Act for the better regulating the future Marriages of the Royal Family" It is amongst other things enacted that no descendant of the body of His late Majesty King George the Second Male or Female (other than the issue of Princesses who have married or may hereafter marry into Foreign Families), shall be capable of contracting Matrimony without the previous consent of His Majesty, His Heirs or Successors, signified under the Great Seal

Now know ye that We have consented and do by these Presents signify Our Consent to the contracting of Matrimony between Her most dearly beloved Daughter Her Royal Highness Princess Victoria Alexandra Maria Mary and Viscount George Francis Lascelles, commonly called Viscount Lascelles.

In Witness whereof We have caused Our Great Seal to be affixed to these Presents Given at Our Court at Saint James the 25th day of December in the 25th year of Our Majesty

By the King of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland and of the British Dominions beyond the Seas signed with His Own Hand.

Immediately below the portraits of Princess Mary of England and her betrothed, Viscount Lascelles, is the fac-simile of the King's consent to the marriage, signed and sealed at the House of Lords. Attached to the lower part of the document is the Great Seal of the Kingdom. The marriage is expected to take place within two months.

Reconstruction
in Devastated Regions of France

THE devastation wrought in France during the four years of fighting in the World War was almost beyond computation. The figures are staggering. In the industrial field the destruction of factories in the invaded districts ranged from 60 to 100 per cent. Sugar mills, textile establishments and iron foundries were largely wiped out of existence. Five thousand factories were destroyed and their equipment either rendered useless or carried away into Germany. Dwelling houses shared in the general ruin. In a hundred towns not a single house remained standing. Three hundred thousand houses were destroyed and as many more damaged. The ruin seemed irreparable, but the French people set to work and already have accomplished marvels in the way of reconstruction. Four thousand industrial establishments have been rebuilt. Thirty-five hundred miles of railroad have been put in operation. Four hundred miles of canal have been repaired. Four million acres of farm land have been cleared and three million put under cultivation. Houses are springing up everywhere and new towns are taking the place of those that were destroyed. It will take a generation, however, to complete the work of reconstruction.

Restoration of Historic Rheims Cathedral

Rheims Cathedral as it looks today, while the work of restoration is being carried on. The ravages suffered by the famous building during the war are being rapidly made good by skilled workmen under the supervision of the greatest architects in France.

THE Cathedral at Rheims, France, is one of the most renowned in Europe. Rich historical associations cluster about it. Here it was that Joan of Arc by her victories over the English invaders made it possible for Charles VII. to be crowned. The building is one of the finest specimens of Gothic architecture in all Europe. Before its bombardment by the Germans, 600 statues adorned the triple portal of its western front, which also had above it a wonderful rose window filled with exquisite amber-colored glass of the thirteenth century. The interior of the structure was vast, but perfectly symmetrical and majestic. Among its treasures were magnificent Gobelin tapestry, a clock with moving figures, one of the oldest in existence, and the flask of reputed holy oil which was said to have been brought from heaven by a dove to St. Remigius when he baptized Clovis, King of the Franks, in 496. During the greater part of the World War the Cathedral was under the fire of German guns. It was hoped that the value of the structure to the world of art would save it from vandalism, but the hope was vain. Enormous damage was done to the majestic building by the German shells, and when at last the invaders were forced to retreat it was figured that the venerable building was ruined beyond repair. The French set to work, however, with indomitable energy to restore it, and while it can never be the same, it is already assuming much of its pristine majesty and beauty.

Interior scene, showing workman removing debris. The new columns that have been put in place of those shattered by gun fire are in evidence. While some of the damage done during the siege is irreparable, most of it can be made good.

Damaged statues over the great doorway of the Cathedral bound with wire to prevent further collapse until the work of renovation and restoration can be fully carried out. They are figures of saints and apostles.

Features of Small But Important Island of Yap

THE little Island of Yap in the Pacific has an area of only thirty square miles, but has assumed an importance in international affairs altogether out of proportion to its size. It was formerly under German control, but after the war was given as a mandated island to the Japanese Government. Its importance arises from the fact that it is the junction point of the oceanic cable lines which run to Manila by way of Guam, to Shanghai and to Menado, on the Island of Celebes. The United States was unwilling to have this nerve centre in the international cable system exclusively under Japanese control, and for a year past correspondence on the subject has been interchanged by America and Japan. It is now announced that an agreement has been reached by which the United States shall have access to the island on a footing of entire equality with Japan in all that relates to the operation of the Yap-Guam cable.

It is decorated on the exterior sometimes by painted logs and again by great colored shells pendant from the peak of the roof. The interior is embellished with artistic interlacing tracings.

Mammoth Grapevine—Prohibition Raid in Boston

GRAPEVINE 100 YEARS OLD
 One of the largest and oldest grapevines in the world is the one here shown. It was planted at the San Gabriel Mission in California in 1775, the year before the Declaration of Independence was signed. The early Catholic missions in that region were famous for the skill and care with which they developed their vines and orchards, and this century-old vine is one of the tributes to their expertness in this regard. It has spread until it covers 10,000 feet of ground, and the fruit it bears is of the finest quality and in great request.

SECRETS OF THE PARIS CONFERENCE

Woodrow Wilson's famous Steel Box guarded them all. Ray Stannard Baker, eminent author and editor, was appointed by Mr. Wilson to write the true account of the Peace Conference from the private papers contained in the Steel Box, which tell the heretofore unpublished story of an epoch-making event.

The result of two years of study and labor is appearing every Sunday in The New York Times.

Documents and letters seen only by Wilson, Lloyd George, Clemenceau and Orlando were consulted in writing the first complete story of the Paris negotiations.

Minutes carefully guarded from public view by Government Chiefs, personal memoranda signed by the great leaders, confidential reports from statesmen and military men—all those private records make up the story that lays bare the motives and schemes in the background of the Paris Conference.

PICTURE HISTORY OF THE WAR

THE MID-WEEK PICTORIAL

Published by The New York Times Company.

A Portfolio containing 1,400 Roto Etchings, in chronological order, covering the War, the armament, the historic scenes, important personages and notable episodes. The above etching is a greatly reduced reproduction of the Portfolio; the Portfolio itself (open) measures 2 feet by 1 1-3 feet; it weighs 9 lbs., contains 528 pages, without including the large supplemental maps. It is endorsed by President Wilson, David Lloyd George, General Pershing, Admiral Sims, Ex-Secretary of War Baker, Ex-Secretary of State Lansing, Ex-Secretary of Navy Daniels.

A PICTORIAL ENCYCLOPEDIA OF THE WAR

Nothing on such a scale has ever been attempted before. It is a pictorial encyclopedia of the war. As an imperishable record of imperishable deeds it will prove a priceless possession in any household, and its value will increase with every year that removes us from the conflict. Imagine what such a picture history of our Civil War would be worth today! Its price would be computed in hundreds of dollars. How much more value will the Portfolio of the War of Nations have! Where one nation of thirty millions was affected by our Civil War, this wonderful Portfolio tells the story of the war of nearly all the nations of the world, in which almost every inhabitant of the earth was involved.

Special Offer to Mid-Week Readers

Cut this out.

The Portfolio will be sent anywhere in the United States, East of the Mississippi River, postpaid, to any New Year Subscriber of the MID-WEEK PICTORIAL on receipt of $15 for the Mid-Week one year and the Portfolio ($16 West of the Mississippi River).

Poise begins at the feet

AS HOSTESS in your own home, your poise, the most desirable of social graces and your attentive interest in others which causes friends to call you charming—these depend a lot upon comfortable footwear. Ill-fitting shoes, forever nagging one, are on your mind and spoil your conversational ability.

As hostess and as guest, at tea or the theater, shopping, working or walking, you feel comfortably shod and more at your ease in Cantilever Shoes. Free from the foot-strain which you may have experienced in other shoes, your mind will be easier, livelier and your manner more charming. Trim boots, smart oxfords, it is easy to feel and look your best in Cantilever lasts.

Cantilevers are patterned upon the lines of the foot. They are graceful, comfortable shoes.

There is toe room without cumbersome width. The smart heels are set to establish good posture, which medical authorities proclaim essential to good health.

A flexible shank allows the foot perfect freedom. No concealed steel shank-piece restricts the movement of the muscles. In Cantilevers the feet grow supple and healthy because the muscles exercise as you walk. Circulation is stimulated. Foot troubles, poor carriage, nervousness and fatigue are banished if you wear Cantilever Shoes.

Try them on, at one of the stores listed at the left. If none of these dealers is near you, write the manufacturers, Morse & Burt Co., 11 Carlton Ave., Brooklyn, N. Y., for an interesting shoe booklet and the address of a nearby dealer.
